

The top five New York art shows this week

Check out our suggestions for the best art exhibitions you don't want to miss, including gallery openings and more

By Howard Halle | Posted: Monday, January 28, 2019

With New York's art scene being so prominent yet ever changing, you'll want to be sure to catch significant shows. Time Out New York rounds up the top five art exhibitions of the week, from offerings at the best photography and art galleries in NYC to shows at renowned institutions like the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art and the Guggenheim.

3. "Linda Carmella Sibio: The Economics of Suffering"

Photograph courtesy of Andrew Edlin Gallery

TIME OUT SAYS

Martha Wilson, artist and founder of the legendary alternative space, Franklin Furnace, serves as curator for this selection of works on paper by Sibio, whose visually dense compositions are characterized by the sort of obsessive attention to detail usually associated with self-taught, visionary artists (though Sibio herself has a BFA). Like her mother, Sibio was diagnosed with schizophrenia, and was consigned to an orphanage after her mother's institutionalization and her father's death. These experiences find their way into her work, which deals with society's dispossessed: The poor, the mentally ill, the homeless and other denizens of society's margins.

POSTED: MONDAY JANUARY 28 2019